Use of Cookies and Web Beacons

A cookie is a small text file containing information that a web site transfers to your computer for recordkeeping purposes. We use cookies to analyze traffic patterns on our site. A web beacon is a transparent, 1-pixel image in .gif format that helps us collect data about visitors viewing a web page -- for example, to count the number of visitors to a page or to deliver a cookie to visitors' browsers when they view that page. We may use web beacons on this site from time to time for these and other purposes.

Cookies and web beacons cannot give us access to your computer or to information beyond what you provide to us. Disabling cookies in your browser will prevent us from using cookies or web beacons to collect data about your visit to our site, but you will still be able to view the publicly available information on our web site. Most web browsers automatically accept cookies. Consult your browser's manual or online help if you want information on restricting or disabling the browser's handling of cookies. If you are using a shared computer and you have cookies turned on, be sure to log off when you finish.

Use of these technologies by authorized third-party service providers

We may work with third-party companies, commonly known as service providers, who are authorized to place third-party cookies, web beacons, or similar technologies for storing information on our sites or in our services, applications, and tools with our permission. These service providers help us to provide you with a better, faster, and safer experience.

These service providers may use these technologies to help us deliver our own content and advertising, and compile anonymous site metrics and analytics. Third-party cookies are covered by the third parties' privacy policy.

For more information on third-party service providers that we use and how to opt-out of them, please visit the following third party websites: How Google uses data when you use our partners' sites or apps
